HINESVILLE, GA. – Poole’s Deli hosted a ribbon cutting in conjunction with the Liberty County Chamber of Commerce on Thursday, December 15th at their restaurant, 406 South Main Street in downtown Hinesville. The ribbon cutting was held in celebration of Poole’s 20th year in business. Owner, Susan McCorkle, welcomed family, staff, chamber staff, board members, ambassadors, members and people from the community to this event.

“It has been an amazing 20 years here, thank you to my friends, family, staff and loyal customers for your continued support,” said Susan McCorkle. She went on to introduce her family members in attendance, representing three generations of hard work and dedication to the family business.

Poole’s Deli specializes in daily offerings of breakfast and lunch. They pride themselves in providing southern, homestyle cooking, made fresh and served fresh. Poole’s is the creator of “breakfast in a cup,” a well-known creation to locals that frequent the restaurant for their morning energy.

“Thank you for being a dynamic member of the Chamber, we value your business and congratulate you on your 20 years of success,” said Kevin Thomas, Chairman of the Board of Directors with Liberty County Chamber of Commerce.

Guests were invited to mingle while enjoying decadent treats, some chose to treat themselves to a full turkey and dressing lunch. Poole’s began as a grocery store, evolving into the hopping eatery that it is today. Other services offered include catering, group meals, children’s meals, fundraisers and take-out. Stop in for a ray of sunshine from Susan herself, or call (912) 876-3549 with questions.

Established in 1976, the Liberty County Chamber of Commerce’s mission is to support new and existing business, trade and industry within Liberty County, while increasing the cultural, civic, educational and overall quality of life of its citizens. The Chamber and its’ 442 members are committed to enhancing the local business climate and maintaining a high quality of life in the community.
