HINESVILLE, GA. – That’s Italian Pizza & Pasta restaurant hosted a ribbon cutting in conjunction with the Liberty County Chamber of Commerce on Monday, November 7th at their restaurant, 324 Memorial Drive in downtown Hinesville. Owner, Gennaro Esposito, welcomed city elected officials, chamber staff, board members, ambassadors, members and people from the community to this event.

“I’ve traveled to many locations in Italy, and I am thrilled to have a true taste of Italy here in downtown Hinesville,” said Mayor James Thomas. He went on to share locations in Italy he has traveled to and commended Esposito on his contribution to the community.

That’s Italian Pizza & Pasta restaurant has a motto “chi mangia bene, vive bene”, which means “Who eats well, lives well”. The restaurant offers fine cuisine including paninis, salads, subs, philly cheesesteaks, pizzas and much more. Free delivery is available, as well as special lunch offers from 11am-3pm daily.

“We welcome you to the Chamber, we are here for you and support your growing business,” said Kevin Thomas, Chairman of the Board of Directors with Liberty County Chamber of Commerce.

Those in attendance enjoyed a large buffet of Italian food, including garlic knots, variations of Stromboli, specialty pizzas and many more tasty treats. The event commenced with attendees conversing over the cuisine and many were pleased to take home the buffet leftovers.

Established in 1976, the Liberty County Chamber of Commerce’s mission is to support new and existing business, trade and industry within Liberty County, while increasing the cultural, civic, educational and overall quality of life of its citizens. The Chamber and its’ 442 members are committed to enhancing the local business climate and maintaining a high quality of life in the community.
